PRAIRIE HISTORY

We are making lots of dough into bread,
As regards our bank account it is dead;
And the reason, you must say,
Is because we give away
Canda Bread that's wrapped so neat, very cheap

LIEUT. COLONEL W. E. SEABORN

Officer commanding, was prior to the war, in command of D Company, 60th R.I.C.s. This company provided one platoon of men at the outbreak of the war. As far as known all these men were either killed or gained commissions. Previous to their departure Col. (then Capt.) Seaborn presented each man with a pipe. From that time Col. Seaborn undertook, without remuneration the training of officers and N.C.O.'s, over 54 officers and 200 N.C.O.'s qualified under his tuition. On formation of the 128th Battalion, he was appointed Major and second in command and took charge of the great recruiting campaign held in 1915-16 for that unit.

When the 29th division, Col. Seaborn proceeded to the 5th Army, joining the staff of the 1st Army Corps, Tins Corps was one of the Old Contemptibles that retired from Mons. Col. Seaborn remained with this Corps in the Ypres Salient for all the Flanders battles, commencing with Passchendaele, and left only when this H.Q. moved safely on the Rhine.

The Colonel was mentioned in Sir Douglas Haig's despatches. The Colonel was one of the most popular N.C.O. with his battalion, and was liked by officers and men under him.

History of The 210th Battalion

The 210th Battalion was authorized in March, 1916, with Lieut-Colonel W. E. Seaborn in command. The other local battalions had made their start from units already recruited. This battalion, however, had no such advantage. The O.C. was at first all alone and had to commence from the bottom.

Recruiting

The first headquarters of the battalion were located in the Scott Block, in rooms generously provided free of cost by Mr. Thos. Miller.

Training and recruiting went on apace until June when the unit was ordered to proceed to Camp Hughes for summer training. The quality of the training at camp is well known. The 210th took first honors and the much coveted Strathcona Cup for marksmanship, from 33,000 competitors.

Owing to the lack of transport the battalion did not proceed overseas from camp, but returned to the Douglas Barracks for winter training.

Women's Auxiliary

Valuable assistance was given by the Women's Auxiliary. In addition to providing untold comforts to the boys and assisting in recruiting the battalion, these ladies presented a most beautiful set of colors to the unit just before it proceeded overseas. The actual presentation was made by His Honor the Lieut-Governor and Lady Lake, assisted by Right Rev. the Bishop of Qu'Appelle and Archdeacon Johnson, in the presence of a large concourse of citizens.

Presentation of Colors

The presentation and trooping of the colors was carried out in every detail in true Guards fashion. After the ceremony a reception was held by the Lieut-Governor and Lady Lake in the barracks, and was attended by a very large number of Moose Jaw citizens, the Woman's Auxiliary serving tea.

Shortly afterwards the colors were deposited with due ceremony in St. Andrews' Church to be cared for until the boys returned.

Entraining for Overseas

Needless to say, when the boys marched off to entrain for overseas, one of the largest crowds ever gathered together in Moose Jaw, was at the station to wish the boys God-speed.

The battalion travelled to Halifax in two trains, remaining over at Ottawa for one day to be inspected by the Duke of Devonshire, who had just previously been installed as Governor-General of Canada.

The unit embarked in the Cunarder "Carpathia" at Halifax. The "Carpathia" has since been torpedoed, and is lying at the bottom of the ocean. The good ship sailed out to sea on the evening of April 10th under the escort of H.M.S. Antrim. All lights had to be extinguished. Everything was pitch black. In the middle of the night everyone was suddenly startled by a rather violent impact on the port side.

Reports were current of German raiders being in the vicinity, and everyone thought that it was "all off." It turned out that a fishing schooner had collided with the Carpathia. Nineteen of the fishing crew were taken aboard as the damage to the schooner had rendered her unseaworthy. Coal oil was then spread over the schooner and fired. The last seen of her was a red glow in the sky.

The week which the 210th spent at sea proved to be the most serious of all the war—as far as submarine losses were concerned. When the danger area was approached no less than three S.O.S. calls were received from sinking ships. Immense quantities of wreckage and some dead bodies in life preservers were seen floating on the water.

The boys throughout were calm, and showed their usual perfect discipline. Every man of the battalion stayed on the deck throughout. The ships passed through and landed safely about the 21st of April.

On arriving at Bramshott Camp the battalion remained as a unit for two weeks. This was one of the happiest times in the life of the battalion. The H.Q. officials had examined them physically, and in training, and had pronounced them the best unit that had ever marched into Bramshott.

Word came that the men were to proceed to France to reinforce other battalions. The boys who had trained and worked together so long and so well were to be separated. The 210th then had its last parade as a unit. For the last time the boys put up a real exhibition of battalion manoeuvres done by a crack battalion. Bringing them to a halt in mass formation the Colonel thanked the boys for the loyalty and efficiency they had always shown. He then told them that they had come to the parting of the ways, that the war situation demanded that the unit be split up to provide reinforcements. "You have always shown yourselves to be men. I know that you will always act as such," said the Colonel.

Within a month over 75 per cent. of the battalion was in France. Most of the men went to the 46th and 1st C.M.R.

While with these units the men received their initial experience under fire in the vicinity of Lens, afterwards coming up to Belgium to take part in the storming of Passchendaele, which cost so many Canadian lives in proportion to the advantage obtained. The next and most successful drive was forward from Amiens on August 8, 1918, when the Canadians broke all records, including those of the enemy for rapid progress. From this memorable battle they went back in front of Arras again, where they later took part in that last "hundred days" of fighting which finally brought about the Armistice and Victory.

MAJOR O. M. MAITLAND, D.S.O.
Second in Command

Major O. M. Maitland was one of Col. Seaborn's pupils, enlisting in the 128th Battalion as Lieutenant.

Promoted to Captain on transferring to the 210th Battalion, later promoted to Major and second in command. On Battalion being broken up he proceeded to 18th Corps, and remained with them as Field Engineer until the end. The Major did excellent work and was mentioned in despatches and awarded D.S.O.

Lest We Forget

In Flanders fields the poppies grow,
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard 'mid roar or guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow;
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe,
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

The Bugle Band was one of the best ever heard in Moose Jaw, and was under the leadership of Drum-Major Cant. He was for some time with the famous Royal Fusiliers of the city of London, as Corporal Drummer and Bugler. All marches played by the Bugle Band were composed by the Drum-Major.
